Courtney Cook is the Field Director for PROMO, Missouri's LGBTQ+ public policy and advocacy organization. PROMO works to defend the community's rights and has been fighting to expand protections for more than 35 years. Before transitioning to advocacy, Courtney worked at JPMorgan Chase for 13 years, gaining skills in leadership and data analytics.

Courtney serves as the President of Ujima Language and Literacy, a non-profit organization that exists to connect, empower, and advocate for children and families. She also serves on the board of directors for The GLO Center, serving the LGBTQIA+ community in the Ozarks through support, resources, education, and advocacy, to create a more inclusive and welcoming community where all can thrive. Her self-interest is to live in a state where she and her community are valued and can thrive. These organizations are integral in creating that community.
