

Joy Robertson

Joy Robertson worked as a news anchor and reporter for about 25 years, covering breaking news, feature stories, crime, politics and everything in between. She started her career at KMIZ-TV (ABC) in Columbia, Missouri and later moved to KXJB-TV (CBS) in Fargo, North Dakota before eventually landing in Springfield, Missouri at KOLR-10 (CBS) in 1997. But after two children - and too many years of late night hours -- Joy traded the 5, 6 & 10pm daily news grind for food, drink and fun as a correspondent and producer for The Food Channel online. Later she went back to her KOLR stomping ground as co-host of the live, daily lifestyle show, Ozarks Live!

Joy has taken viewers noodling for catfish in her home state of Arkansas, wine tasting in the California Wine Country, snow shoeing in Door County, Wisconsin, hiking and biking in Aspen, Colorado and food tasting at some of the country's most celebrated food shows. She's broadcast live from the White House and flown in an F-16 fighter jet with the U.S. Air Force Thunderbirds. She's produced content from San Francisco to Stonehenge, from London to New York to Las Vegas to Chicago, and nearly everywhere in between.

Joy has ventured outside of television too, hosting the weekly radio show Talking Women's Sports on The Jock FM, and serving as both producer and host of the food-themed podcast Inside the Food Channel.

Joy now works as a licensed Realtor in Missouri and gets her journalism fix by writing for her company blog and penning the occasional freelance article for 417 Magazine. She is also the host and producer of the Savor the Ozarks podcast. She still shows up on television and online, hosting luxury home tours and the weekly homebuilders' show, It's More Than Just a Home on KYTV (NBC).
